Hello Friends,

The holiday season is here and, once again, we are preparing for a brand new year. With all that in mind, we want to wish you a wonderful season among loved ones and an opportunity to reflect and reset. We also want to remind you of our crowdfunding campaign and invite you to make a donation to the Movement Strategy Network. If you can’t donate — or if you already did — join us in “friendraising.”

Follow us on social media; comment, share, and like; and check out our website’s fresh, new Resources page! And you must check out this fun and inspiring video we put together with Aisha Shillingford of Intelligent Mischief, to celebrate our first #GivingTuesday and End of Year Giving campaigns.

We also want to recognize our board. First, help us welcome our newest member, Venita Ray. The co-executive director of the Positive Women’s Network-USA, she is a policy advocate, speaker, and strategist for issues impacting those living with HIV. Venita was instrumental in defeating a Texas effort that would’ve
Second: a big congratulations to Jacqui Patterson, an environmental justice advocate who works in capacity-building for climate and social justice in Black communities. Jacqui is one of the recipients of the prestigious Heinz Awards for the Environment and we are honored to call her a member of our Beloved Community.

Finally, we recognize our board chair, Anasa Troutman, for her recent feature in the New York Times. The piece covers her work building communities of safety, abundance, and joy for Black people through the redevelopment of the Historic Clayborn Temple, an important location during the 1968 sanitation workers’ strike in Memphis. Troutman joins other developers in historically Black neighborhoods nationwide who are repurposing deteriorated structures with the goal of creating spaces for the arts, affordable housing, and small businesses.
